

Informed Consent Laws

Thirty-one state laws are in effect.

- Twenty-four states require informed consent with a one-day reflection period (usually 24 hours): AL, AR, GA, ID, IN (18 hours), KS, KY, LA, MI, MN, MS, MO, NE, ND, OH, OK, PA, SC, SD (additional reflection period enacted in 2011 is in litigation), TX, UT, VA, WV, and WI.

- Seven states require informed consent with no reflection period: AK, CA, CT, FL, ME, NV, and RI.

- Six states have enacted informed consent laws that are in litigation or enjoined: AZ, DE, MA, MT, NC, and TN.

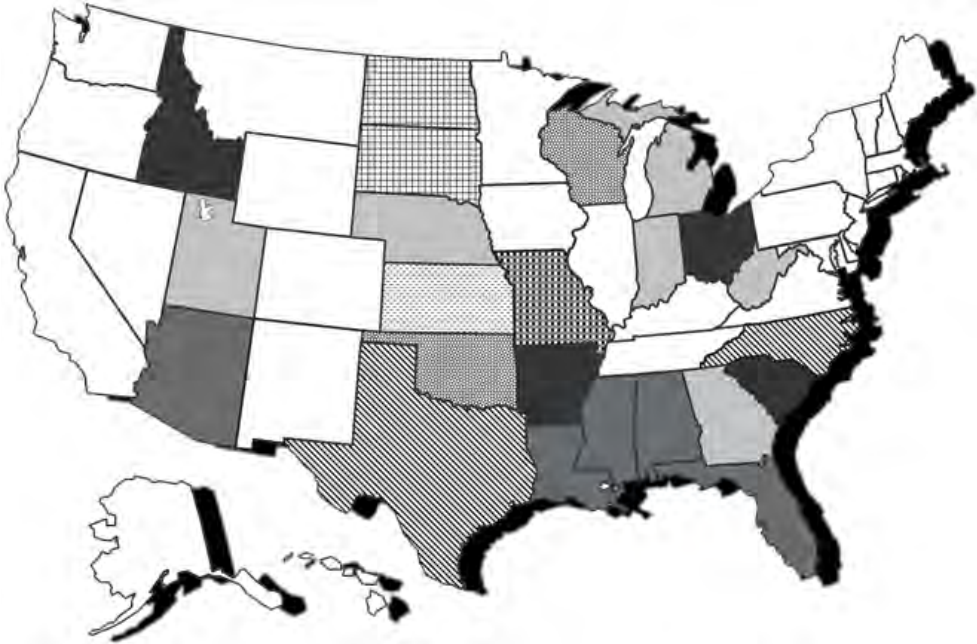

Informed Consent Regarding Fetal Pain

-  Seven states require women receive information about fetal pain and/or the option of anesthesia for the unborn child: AR, GA, LA, MN, MO, OK, and UT.
-  One state law requiring information about fetal pain is in litigation: IN.

Informed Consent Regarding Ultrasound

Twenty-one states require women receive information about the availability of ultrasound services prior to abortion or require the performance of an ultrasound prior to abortion: AL, AZ, AR, FL, GA, ID, IN, KS, LA, MI, MO, MS, NE, ND, OH, OK (additional law enacted in 2010 is enjoined and in litigation), SC, SD, UT, WI, and WV.

-  Two states require verbal counseling and/or written materials to include information on ultrasound services: OK and WI.
-  Six states require verbal counseling and/or written materials to include information on ultrasound services and require the abortion provider to offer the opportunity to see an ultrasound image if ultrasound is used in preparation for the abortion: GA, IN, MI, NE, UT, and WV.
-  One state requires verbal counseling and/or written materials to include information on ultrasound services and requires the abortion provider to offer the opportunity to see an ultrasound image, even if ultrasound is not used in preparation for the abortion: MO.
-  Four states require the abortion provider to offer a woman the opportunity to see an ultrasound image if ultrasound is used in the preparation for the abortion: AR, ID, OH, and SC.
-  Five states require an ultrasound for each abortion and require the abortion provider to offer the opportunity to view the image: AL, AZ, FL, LA, and MS.

One state requires an ultrasound for each abortion and requires the abortion provider to review, at the request of the woman, the ultrasound evaluation results: KS

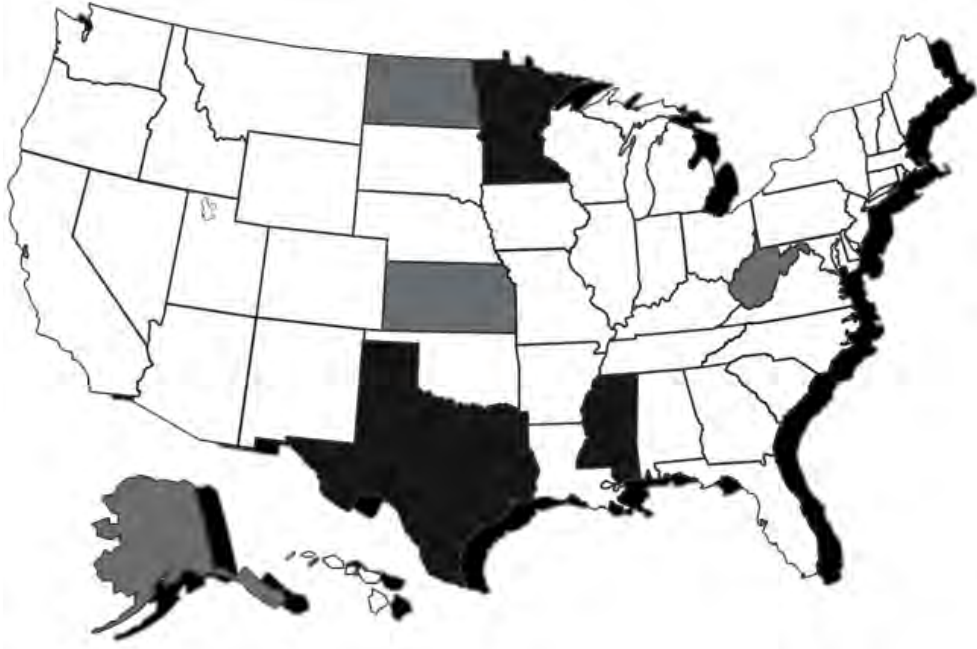

Two states require the abortion provider to offer the opportunity to view an ultrasound image: ND and SD.

Two states' ultrasound laws are in litigation: NC and TX.

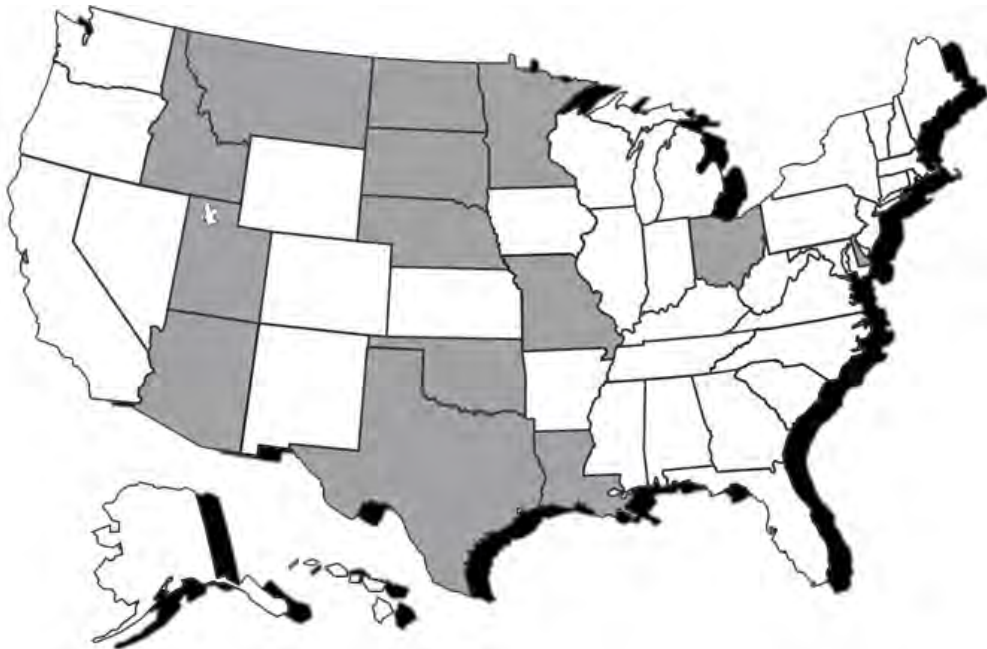

Informed Consent Regarding Abortion & Breast Cancer Link

- Three states explicitly require a physician to inform a woman seeking abortion of the link between abortion and breast cancer: MN, MS, and TX.
- Four states include information about the link between abortion and breast cancer in the state-mandated educational materials that a woman must receive prior to abortion: AK, KS, ND, and WV.

Coercive Abuse Prevention Laws

■ At least fourteen states have some form of coercive abuse prevention laws, with varying definitions and degrees of protection: AZ, DE, ID, LA, MN, MO, MT, NE, ND, OH, OK, SD, TX, and UT.